Washington, June 14.—Administration leaders in the senate were jubilant today over the prospects of the tariff bill. They unhesitatingly asserted that the party was ready for harmonious action and predicted that a clear democratic majority for the measure as it comes from the caucus will not be endangered.

Admitting that the situation in the senate was anything but satisfactory when the bill passed the house, the leaders now contend that prolonged preliminary consideration of the measure has brought out "an ironing out of the rough places" in the party alignment and that every development has been in favor of the administration policies. Today the democratic majority resumed consideration of subcommittee reports.

John S. Carroll of St. Louis, attorney for the Hill system of railways, testified today in the senate investigation. His only tariff activity he said was the filing of a brief for the Great Northern and Burlington roads dealing with creosote oil.

"I want to say that the so-called Hill railroads have no one in Washington trying to influence legislation," said he. Mr. Carroll added that James J. Hill and possibly other officials of the Hill road had been in Washington recently, but that they did not come in connection with legislation.

Anselm Vold, the senate printing clerk testified about the orders for printing "Sugar at a glance," an anti-sugar argument prepared by Truman G. Palmer, representing the sugar interests and circulated free in the mails by hundreds of thousands of copies under the franking privilege of Senator Lodge. Vold told of the procedure in printing the pamphlet and turning to Senator Overman referred to a previous conversation.

"I told you then somebody had been monkeying with the bills and I think Vold could not throw much light on the situation and other sugar employees may be called. When F. R. Hathaway of the Michigan Beet Sugar Company testified, he said that he broke out again between Senator Reed and Senator Nelson. Reed insisted on having the witness answer in one way, and the witness persisted in answering another.

Henry T. Hiltunen, vice-president of the American Beet Sugar Company, testified today before the senate subcommittee that he estimated he had spent on an average of $20,000 a year in Washington for the past twenty-three years in behalf of the beet sugar industry. He declared, however, that he had spent, illegally, each year when he was at his home in Washington, he declared, he came to the city and watch agitation and see his friends among the senators. Senator Reed demanded that he witness give the names of senators who were his friends.

"Most all the senators," replied Mr. Oxnard.

"You need not include me in that list," declared Senator Reed.

"Well, I call Senator Overman one of my friends," and Senator Cummins and Senator Nelson. "I do not know much about Senator Nelson," said the witness. Senator Overman promptly asked Mr. Oxnard if he had ever called upon at his office or house or if he had attended any of Mr. Oxnard's entertainments. Mr. Oxnard replied in the negative. The committee adjourned until Monday without finishing the examination.

Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador here, was reported to have said that Japan is willing to ready for other period of five years her arbitration with the United States which expires by limitation August 24. Secretary Bryan said the announcement would be hoped not only but expected the senate would ratify the new arbitration treaty already signed with Great Britain and other countries despite the opposition against them. No date for the ratification of the Japanese renewal has been determined.

The Italian government has notified the United States that Thomas Nelson Page, will be accepted as American ambassador.

Shawano, Wis., June 14.—Two infant children of August Neubauer, a farmer residing here, were burned to death last Friday afternoon when the Neubauer home was burned to the ground. The father was probably fatally burned in the fire. The mother, who was rescued, was burned on her face and arms. The two children, one two and a half years old and the other six months, were left in the house alone while the father and mother were occupied in the field near by. The fire which gained sudden headway, prevented their rescue and probably fatally burned the father and mother when they first reached the scene and failed to reach the little ones.

ROYAL HONEYMOON
SPENT AT HUNTING
LODGE OF EMPERORPrincess Victoria Louise and Young
Duke of Cumberland at Beautiful
Chateau in Forest.[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, June 14.—Princess Victoria Louise and the young Duke of Cumberland, who were married in Berlin, in May, are spending their honeymoon at Hubertusstock, a favorite hunting lodge of Emperor William, the bride's father.

This chateau in the forest is most beautifully situated, and its history is not without interest. Its beauty has appealed to previous royal couples, several other members of the reigning family having spent their honeymoons there, the latest being the crown prince and his bride. The lodge is near Lake Verbellien, thirty miles north of the capital. It owes its existence to King Frederick William IV, the emperor's grandfather. The first German emperor, King Wilhelm I, spent his honeymoon there, dismounted to rest in the woods the beauty of which entranced him. He decided at once to build a house amid such romantic and pleasant surroundings. He announced his decision and the king's wife, the princess, the Germans call it a stock, in the ground at his feet, named the lodge Hubertusstock, in honor of St. Hubertus, the patron saint of hunters.

The chateau is small but very comfortable. Emperor William added to it from time to time in order to have room for the entertainment of his hunting guests. The outer walls of the chateau are ornamented with stags and antlers, inside the trophies of the chase are much in evidence.

The houses of Hohenzollern and Hanover-Brunswick, now united in the person of the young couple, have been estranged ever since the king of Prussia dethroned the then King of Hanover. Nevertheless the blood ties between them are remarkably numerous. Victoria Louise and Ernst August, emperor's daughter and her husband, are connected through so many ramifications of kinship that the most expert genealogist would be baffled to answer the question how they are related. They are descendants of two sisters, daughters of a grand duke of Mecklenburg.

The princess' great-grandmother was the famous Queen Louise, wife of Frederick William III, who died of a broken heart during the French occupation of Prussia. The other was Queen Victoria, the wife of the late king of Great Britain. The princess' great-grandfather was the son of Queen Victoria of England and Victoria Louise is also descended from the emperor, her grandmother, the Empress Frederick, having been a daughter of Queen Victoria of England, who was herself a great-granddaughter of George III.

While the duke and his bride are not actually blood relatives, their family connection is manifest through a series of intermarriages covering two centuries.

To Build New Embassy.
Designs for the new German embassy to be built at Washington have been solicited from architects of German nationality, and four prizes amounting to $20,000 each, will be awarded to the architect whose design is selected. The prize jury consists of six prominent architects, the minister of foreign affairs, Herr von Jagow, and the German ambassador at Washington, Count Bernstorff.

The competition for the Washington embassy is directed to result in the construction of which was entrusted without competition to Prof. Peter Behrens, one of Germany's most prominent architects. His effort to result in a structure of massive and monumental simplicity, as demanded by Emperor William, were not altogether happy. Though the design is a masterpiece, it would have been more successful if Petersburg speaks of the German building as a cross between a cold storage warehouse and a prison, entirely out of harmony with the other buildings in the city. The square, around which are the best edifices of the Russian capital.

Get Important Contract.
A German electrical firm, competing with other firms in the same business, has just secured a $1,000,000 contract for an electrical plant in Chile, to be constructed with American capital. This contract covers only the first installation, and the German company will be on the ground for further extensions which are expected ultimately to amount to several million dollars more.

The plant is that of an American export company, which foresees a great development of the power of the South American after the opening of the Panama canal, and is preparing to work copper deposits in Northern Chile. The first contract covers the construction of a main electrical station on the coast, and a secondary station, 125 miles distant, on which the power is to be transmitted on a high-tension circuit.

While the German Navy Society was in session at Mannheim May 25 and King George and Queen Mary, as guests at the marriage of Princess Victoria Louise, were demonstrating the navy, the German Navy League was devoting its annual meeting to Bremen to furthering its propaganda for a greater navy.

A week ago the Military League was agitating for further increases in the army, and now those interested in the greater German navy are making themselves heard. They declare previous increases to be inadequate, and demand an extra battleship cruiser to be laid down in 1914 and a battleship squadron is fully formed and organized, two years hence, it will be necessary to take up the question of strengthening the reserve fleet organization. The league will devote its efforts to seeing that the reserve squadrons are manned like the British, with one-half of the sailor and three-fourths of the technical personnel, so that they can be sent in for short periods, and not weeks, after a declaration of war.

American conditions did not escape notice, and the league demanded of the admiralty two new small cruisers, to be stationed permanently in the east and west coasts of America as well as a new "flying squadron," composed of great and small cruisers, to be kept permanently in readiness to steam to any part of the world where action is necessary to protect German prestige and commerce. Recent events in Mexico and Haiti, when the one German cruiser on the American station was prevented from immediately appearing to show the flag and protect German interests, were responsible for this demand.

The train bearing the coffin left Epsom station soon after eleven o'clock. The coffin which was covered with a purple towel was accompanied to London by Miss Davison's brother and a suffragette guard of honor.

The program was arranged for last night was for the funeral procession to pass through the main streets of London between Victoria station and Bloomsbury. This morning officials of Scotland yard suggested that the women parade through the more quiet section of the city. The suffragettes were highly indignant at this and declared they would not be deterred by the police and the possibility of a collision thus seemed large.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—Rear Admiral Hugo J. Osterhaus, until recently commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet, will be placed on the retired list tomorrow on account of age. Rear Admiral Osterhaus is one of the most conspicuous figures in the navy. He represents the second of three generations of the "fighting house of Osterhaus." His father was General Peter J. During the war he served on the cruiser Prairie. His first command as captain was of the battleship Connecticut, which he commanded in the famous cruise around the world. La Crosse, Wis., June 14.—Lieutenant Governor Tom Morris, a resident of La Crosse, today authorized the Associated Press to formally announce his candidacy for United States senator to succeed Isaac Stephenson. His candidacy will go before the republicans in September, 1914. His announcement was made early to clear up the situation because there has been some discussion of his possible candidacy for governor.Begin Ego Fight.
This action of the lieutenant governor is the first step in the ego fight in state politics with the La Follette forces backing Morris lined up on one side and the McGovern forces on the other.

McGovern is generally counted to be the opposition candidate and an interesting feature of the situation is that in 1910 Morris was the candidate for governor, but when McGovern entered the field and it was apparent that the McGovern forces would be split, thus endangering the victory of either Morris voluntarily withdrew, throwing his strength to McGovern and materially aiding the latter in his nomination in the hard contest.

Morris has been considered the La Follette leader in state affairs since the election of the present legislature. He was state senator in 1906 until 1911 and has twice been elected lieutenant governor.

He took a prominent part in the La Follette program of the legislature, including the railway commission law, the public utilities law, the 26 fare law, the corrupt practices act, the La Follette university and other educational measures.

It was on June 14, 1813, that the Government purchased 12 acres of land on which the first of the arsenal buildings were erected. The first arsenal was used wholly for storage purposes. During the civil war arms and equipment were manufactured and repaired there and 2,000 hands were kept busy from 1862 to 1865. The arsenal was built at the arsenal and of late years the plant has been engaged chiefly in turning out the great coast defense guns."Etiquette" in Advertising.

Up to within the last few years it has been considered a breach of etiquette for business and professions to advertise. These men have said: "Oh, yes, advertising is all very well for the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, but it would not do at all for us. It is not good business ethics."

In later years, however, that idea is being abandoned, together with a lot of other old and worn-out theories.

The public now looks to the advertising activity in most lines of business activity in this community, and the day is not far distant when every legitimate business and every recognized profession will understand the value of advertising.

TRIBE OF PYGMIES FOUND LIVING IN
DUTCH NEW GUINEACaptain Cecil C. Rawling, English Explorer, Describes Strange People of Very Short Stature.

London, June 14.—Captain Cecil C. Rawling, the explorer, has recently given English scientists some interesting accounts of a new tribe of pygmies he had discovered in Southwest Dutch New Guinea.

These little people, known as the Tappos, average 4 feet 3 inches in height. They were found living in the low-lying hills of the Kapare river. On the approach of the white men they ran away, but the expedition succeeded in capturing three without injury, brought them near camp. At first they were greatly frightened, but kindness won them over and a few months later they were enabled to establish trading relations with the tribe and were allowed to visit and stay in their village of Wombimi. This village is hidden away in the forest high on a mountain side and was only found after many weeks of searching. While no open hostility was shown by the whites they were not exactly relieved with open arms. Of the women and children they saw nothing, but they were not likely to be heard as they fed up the mountainside on the approach of a stranger.

Describing the men Captain Rawling says, taken as a whole, that they are a dark chocolate color, with a black face, but sometimes with a brown or even red, in worn short, many grow beards, the older men have grey beards. Like all native tribes they wear necklets of animal bones and other small pebbles. Their only clothing consists of a covering around the loins.

"Their houses and surroundings," says Captain Rawling, "are considerably in advance of those of their larger brethren of the plains to the west of Negritos, which with the Negritos are the known tribes of pygmies inhabiting the earth, must now be added to the list of the tribes of the Congo who, so far as the literature is concerned, have not been recorded above the Congo pygmies."

Vessels to Honor Royalty.
Nearly five miles of merchant shipping, consisting of all kinds of vessels from great trans-Atlantic liners to the little tugs which nose them into the berths, will greet King George and Queen Mary when the royal couple pay their first visit to the city and port of Liverpool on July 1.

Since his accession to the throne the king has visited practically every part of the United Kingdom, taking as a keen interest in the great industrial and commercial centers of the great steel and iron works and other factories that bring prosperity to England. His next visit is to Lancashire, the county of the cotton industry, the Duke of Lancaster, who derives his title from his own great estates. It is in Lancashire that the cotton mills, factories and commerce of England's most populous county are concentrated. The king will spend a week there before he goes to Liverpool, the capital of Lancashire, and the most important shipping port, will be the center of the festivities with the king's visit. St. Petersburg, June 14.—A complete breach between the government and the Duma was reported today. Members of the cabinet announced today that neither the ministers nor the Duma departments will appear in the house until conditions are established under which representatives of the government will be secure from insult by members of the Duma.

The immediate cause of the decision was a remark made by M. Markoff, a reactionary member during the debate on estimates. While the minister of finance was speaking, Markoff called out "scoundrel" and "traitor." He added that this remark applied not only to the minister of finance but to all officials of the departments of state. The minister and the other members present in the House were outraged. The minister of the interior spoke strongly in favor of the dissolution of the Duma. He argued that most of the ministers were of the opinion that the cabinet and the Duma were not only a quarrel would be only temporary.

He gave the committee the names of a number of guards and the names of the men who carried them. These guards he said, he carried, stoned three times during the strike. Former Governor Glasscock was recalled for cross-examination by counsel for the mine operators. Attorney General Knickerbocker testified that Glasscock, the first trouble broke out at Boomer, a unionized mine outside of the Paint and Cabin Creek district. A lengthy correspondence between the then governor and the operators on the question of arbitration was placed in the record. After his first proposal was refused by the operators, Glasscock said he framed a new proposal to eliminate the question of arbitration of the union. This second proposal, he said, was likewise rejected by operators although accepted by the miners.

Forty Years Ago
Janesville Daily Gazette, June 14, 1873.—Bus: It is curious to notice the spirit of emulation sometimes provoked among the people engaged in a particular business, by favorable mention in the papers of what one has accomplished, or another possessed. A few days since we alluded to the fact that Mr. Ellison of the Myers House, had purchased a new bus, and we pronounced it the finest institution of the kind in this region. Upon reading that item, John P. Williams of the Williams House started for Neenah, and has returned with a new vehicle, which takes the shine all of the Myers bus. It is elegantly painted and provided with the patent hubs, double back action patent level springs, spokes, felloes, tires and axle, and run like a greased lightning. It is entitled to rank as Bus No. 1 in this part of the country.

With a Jew's eye or a King's ransom. The meaning of these curious sayings will be illustrated by descriptions of deeds more curious, in the lecture of Mr. Jones on the "Red Cross Knight," Myers Opera House, Wednesday evening next, under the auspices of the St. George Benevolent Society.

Captain E. W. Nevins, D. G. W. P., will discourse on "Figs of Thistle" at the Baptist church tomorrow at three p. m. The captain went through the war for the union, and is now engaged in another war. He is state lecturer of the grand division of the sons of temperance of the state of Wisconsin.

JANESVILLE WOMAN IS PRISON WORKER

MRS. ELIZABETH HANSON TO PUBLISH BOOK BY STILL WATER POET.

AWARDED PRIVILEGES

Has Confidence of Minnesota Warden Who Permitted Her to Become Agent of Recognized Genius.

MRS. ELIZABETH HANSON

appeared in the foremost periodicals. John Francis Glenn is the name of the young man whom Mrs. Hanson is assisting to reclaim and develop his talents. Mrs. Hanson, who is a reader by profession, and associated with the National Alliance, a literary organization, made his acquaintance two years ago, when she gave a program at Stillwater prison. For a year she had been learning of his talents and had used some of his selections in readings with gratifying success. Her interest in the young man grew; the acquaintanceship ripened into a friendship, and she determined to help him to self-realization, manhood and success.

Up From the Depths.
"A. N. Apache," is the name by which the prison poet is known to the readers and admirers of his verse. The wonder is not that a man with his talents should place himself behind the bars, but that his genius should have not been stifled by the environment in which he grew up, and his muse kept at a distance by the bidding stone walls. By his own statement, he lived his childhood and youth among the "world's worst elements." He was born in Limerick, Ireland, of good parents and came to this country at the age of three years, exceptionally bright and somewhat of a dreamer. Until fifteen years, he remained in Chicago and although he was held and tried for no serious crime, the facts concerning those years imparted to his patron make plain that he was far from being an angel. He is now thirty-two years of age.

For a "bit of devilry," Glenn was three years ago sentenced from Minneapolis under the state reformatory law to a five year term in the Minnesota state prison. He deserved to go there and he admits it. For a whole year he had a record unmarred by a discredit mark and his case is before the parole board this month, but it is probable that he will not gain his liberty for some time to come. When he does come out Mrs. Hanson is confident that he will make good.

Writes Under Difficulties.
That the imprisoned bard has manhood, courage and more than skills is indicated not only by his poems, but by the obstacles which he overcomes in doing literary work. All his writing must be done between six and nine o. m. For ten hours a day he is obliged to work in the shoe factory; six hours for the remaining four. But he seldom seems to forsake Glenn and although tired and worn he is his fancy takes flight into the realms of the ideally good and beautiful, and his facile mind and pencil transmit to others the thoughts that have inspired him.

Minnesota papers were not long in discovering the worth of the verses that appeared in the prison paper, "The Mirror," over the signature of "A. N. Apache." The editor of the "Thief River Falls Times" was one of the first to frequently republish his poems and became his firm friend as well. His "A Stille of Tears" has been republished seven times. He has several times contributed to the "Duluth News-Tribune." The Southern Buck, an Elks' monthly contained in its June number, "A Prayer," one of his poems, copyrighted through the efforts of Mrs. Hanson, and the July number of the same magazine will also contain one of his poems. Next month his poem, "Dreaming," will be published set to music. Other verses from his pen that won popular approval and been widely copied are, "My Creed," "The Call of the Wild," and "Man in the Stripes," written after hearing Mrs. Hanson read "Polly of the Circus." Three years ago she read this selection before one of the Janesville Rebekah lodges.

Wins Warden's Confidence.
The interest which Mrs. Hanson has taken in prison work has not been without a personal nature. She has been a serious student of prison problems, with especial attention to the reclamation of the criminal. Because of her sincerity and the confidence she has in Warden Henry Wolfert permitted her to make an agreement with Glenn whereby she became his literary agent with full authority to have his literary work published in the privilege of a very unusual nature and was given with the signature and the written consent of the warden. Mrs. Hanson has the highest praise for the official who has made the prison a self-supporting institution which last year turned in $300,000 to the state. Through his efforts the new prison was built in a shorter time that work of its kind has ever been done before. Every man who leaves the institution has a good word for Wolfert.

Men Reclaimed.
"Once a criminal, always a criminal," is a false doctrine, says Mrs. Hanson.

son.—There are few men in prisons who do not desire to be there. Those confined in the state institutions are by no means wholly the "riff-raff" of society. Men do and will come out of prisons to achieve honest distinction and become valuable citizens. The man who left the Minnesota prison a few years ago is now head of a railway division in the east; another, John Carter, had $1,800 in royalty waiting him when he came out the result of a successful play which he had written. Four weeks ago a prisoner just given his freedom walked into a jewelry store in Minneapolis and paid fifty cents to its proprietor which he had owed him previous to his sentence for another crime. The dealer had entirely forgotten the transaction until reminded.

Wasted Efforts.
A great deal of money and effort is wasted in misdirected missionary work among men released from prisons. It is impractical and impolitic to take one of them to church at the result of a successful play which he had written. He was a successful man before he was a prisoner and he is worth saving to have an opportunity to make good; to be encouraged by confidence in his will and desire to become an honest citizen. An honorable discharge and suspension and the reluctance to engage his services, such as he frequently meets when sent out into the world, prevents him from earning an honest living and forces him back into his old ways.

Given Place in Book.
Worthy recognition of the accomplishments of Mrs. Hanson in prison work is to be given. High editor of the "Platform," who editorial pages on Stillwater prison to the editorial pages of Stillwater prison to the second edition of his book, soon forthcoming under the title of "Prison Poems." This will soon be followed by a third edition. The first edition contained an article reprinted from "The Mirror," entitled, "How a Recital is Appreciated by Prisoners." It was written by John Francis Glenn and is a tribute to Mrs. Hanson. Several pieces of his work will appear in the second edition. Favorable press notices were given "Prison Problems," by representative "Prison Poems" and "periodicals" all over the country.

Poems by "A. N. Apache."
Following are reprinted two of the poems by John Francis Glenn representative of his best and most characteristic writings.

A Solid Sonnet.
The crimson sun sinks in the west, the whistle blows, the day is done.

The coldward walks each weary guest, to the repose hard labor won. The dreamer sits down at his door, his pipe is lit, and lights appear. "Visions of the day are o'er, he dreams anew a golden dream. Others may dwell on the power that sends them through Gethsemane. But not for him; it is his hour to send his fancy soaring, free. Adown the mile posts of the years he sees himself a boy again; A stranger unto grief and tears, no knowledge of a road called pain. The purple bloom is on the trees, the green is breaking from the trees. Down by the brook a robin thrills its eventide sweet melody. The golden sun lights up the stream, the evening hush falls o'er the land. God still is good, for in his dream he feels the class of her brown hand.

He hears the cooing of a dove, the cows come to the pasture bars; All is serene, he looks above and feels somewhere behind the stars, a Master architect plans all. And in his great wisdom knows just who deserve the thorns and fall, just who the heights and the rose. And if, at times, he loses heart, (and curses loudly the schemer that oft-times causes tears to start). He begs forgiveness—in his dream. Dream on, O visionary dream! It is your heaven on this earth. Things always are just as they seem when happy dreamland gives them birth. I would not trade those dreams of yours, for all the filthy gold that gleams. The art that ever bones endures, keep on, O boy, and dream your dreams.

Remembrances.
I made a thousand long songs When I was young, And in me still remains the song As yet unsung. I want some time to write a verse—A melody—About a little girl who held Her arms to me.

Long years ago, a battered wreck, I stood With head bowed low. She did not blame, nor censure me With thus or so. She stood and only saw a penitent In misery. And with a sob she put her arms Round about me.

I cannot write it down for I Have not the skill. For she forgave my memory Is with me still. I never knew—till I forgot How great my loss; She planted courage within me To kiss my cross.

You've made a routine of my life and numbered me; You've locked a up with bolts and bars. With locks and key But now and then, regardless of all watch I roam away And travel the rosy road Of yesterday.

Last night I stood again before My boyhood queen. No vain regrets to blight or mar— All was serene. I felt her warm cheek pressed against mine. She tilted me. Thank God, there's one boon left— Fond memory.

It was evident that such an exhibition was possible only after a systematic training such as given the

I WAS BADLY BLOATED

I Could Not Get My Shoes on, My Feet and Legs were so Swollen.

Dropsy is usually caused by organic disease. It may be the heart, or liver, or kidneys. Sometimes the lungs. But there is a form of dropsy that is caused by thin blood. The serum of the blood exudes into the tissues, causing dropsy. It is a very serious condition sometimes, but there is much more prospect of relief, than there is no organic disease behind it. The blood is thin for want of proper assimilation of food. The diet may be poor. In these cases Peruna is a very excellent remedy.

Read What Mrs. Randall says: "I have been a sufferer from Bright's disease nearly six years; also chronic catarrh for a much longer time. One doctor said there was no help for me. Then I wrote the Peruna Medical Department. My body was badly bloated and my feet were so swollen sore I could not get my shoes on. Now the swelling is gone and I can wear my shoes with comfort all the time. At the time I first wrote them, when I stepped on my feet it felt as if they were pins. I suffered excruciating pain and ache in my back and limbs. Since taking Peruna and Manalin I have been greatly benefited. I shall not cease to recommend Peruna whenever I have an opportunity.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets. Advertisement.

sent on Wednesday are easily mastered. This physical training work is now recognized as a most important part of the high school work for girls. It offers in the first place a sort of rest and recreation to counteract the nervous strain of the study hour and the class room. It strengthens the physique, trains the body to be graceful, corrects defects in carriage, and benefits the general health conditions of the body. It is as much a necessary part of the school work as the intellectual side.

Miss Frances Hill of the local faculty, who has had charge of this work for the past year, has achieved remarkable results as any who witnessed the festival will readily testify. In the accompanying illustrations several of the groups in the pageant are shown. It is only possible to show the groupings and the effectiveness of the costumes, for one had to be present to appreciate the dances themselves. Among the numbers shown last evening were the girls in the Dutch Swedish and Scotch folk dances, and the group in one of the minuets.

The Boosters' Primer

There's hardly a man who does not get ruffled when speaking of Trusts and their oppressive methods in strangling all competition. Not many men know, however, that nine times out of ten they are paying tribute to one of the most brutal Trusts, when they buy an eastern cigar. This Trust, along with the Standard Oil Trust, became so all dominating and domineering, that the federal government a short time ago sought, with more or less success, to halt its crushing onward march.

That the local factories were able to hold their own against such a powerful giant must of itself speak well for them. It is plainly a case of shabby product backed up with a million dollar a year advertising campaign, matched against the quality of the cigars produced by the local manufacturers. Only by turning out the highest grade of goods could this be done, and the fact that they all survived ought to be conclusive evidence to all thinking men. None but chronic "croaks," who never have a good word for their home town, can fail to see that.

Though some smokers fell easy victims to the alluring advertisements of the Trust goods, the better judges of cigars continued to smoke the product of their home factories, well knowing that where quality is retained, extra heavy advertising is not possible.

SPORT Snap-Shots

Easy Enough.
"How can I clean three dusty bags?"
"Quarries an anxious fella."
"Meant to be read by the lady, ed."
"But mixed in our morning mail."
"Not that we know how to sew or mend."
"Still we can answer that!"
"Last night had this to do it—send Joe Jackson up to bat."

He's Particular.
Frank Baker of the Athletics, who originated the home-run idea, is very particular about his bats. He keeps them in his own private bat bag and guards them with loving care. If any other member of the team tried to use one of them there would ensue a lively and brutal altercation. Baker is very particular to see that they are never left around nor allowed to associate with the other bats of the club. His teammates know it and leave them all very much alone.

Game's Crude Beginning.
Baseball, the American sport very popular at this season of the year, is just about sixty-five years old, or is that about right? There were about fourteen rules originally drawn up to govern the whole game and they could easily be printed on one page of the present baseball guide. One of the first rules that sounds rather odd today was: "The players must take their strike in regular turn." There was also mention of "hands" and "counts" or "aces" that wouldn't get by at all nowadays.

Ty Is Stirred Up.
Someone has started, to noise, it around that Ty Cobb has been sort of well-laying down a little in his playing with the Tigers. If it comes to your ears, reader, tell em to forget it. Ty is real wrought up over it and says that whoever says so—and so forth—and his whole family. The Georgia Peach thumped more, a little for a week or so, and night away scribbles began saying that he wanted to get released from Detroit and play ball elsewhere. Ty insists vigorously that it is nothing of the sort and he wants everyone to know that he's not a quitter. So let's drop the matter right here.

Can't Kill Plank.
Old Eddie Plank, the southpaw graybeard with the Athletics, is still ringing the bell. They think a world of Eddie in Philadelphia and he's the best bet among Connie Mack's twirlers during the present season. Plank has been pitching in the big leagues for thirteen seasons.

High Cost of Ball Players.
The cost of living may have gone up somewhat for ball players as well as other folks of late years, but ball players' salaries have done some pretty fair climbing, too. Forty years ago the average salary paid a ball player was about $300. It was at about that time that professional baseball was getting started and the old Cincinnati Reds—bless 'em—were the first paid ball team in the history of the game. During the year '69 the Reds didn't lose a game all season, which is a source of consolation to Cincy fans today. Now the Reds get much larger salaries, but they don't seem able to play the whole season without losing a game or two. The high priced man on the team at that time was George Wright, shortstop, who got $1,400. Today Ty Cobb gets something like $12,500. "Gosh!"

BASEBALL CHATTER

Manager Joe Tinker is finding it hard work to lift his Reds out of the cellar and keep them up where the sun can shine on them.

LOCAL HORSEMEN AT ASSOCIATION TRACK MAKE FINE SHOWING

Good Gallery Witnesses the Afternoon Matinee—Much Interest Displayed.

By C. E. (Buck) Hunter.

There are a goodly number of horses at the Park Association tracks that are owned by Janesville, Evansville and Edgerton residents, that are destined to be heard from before the firsts, being out of the money twice. In his first start at Edgerton his driver W. W. Briggs was thrown from the sulky and Penn ran away. In his last start at Watertown, Wis., his many admirers and backers received a very severe shock when he was out of the money in this race, but it was only discovered after the first heat that Penn was not right and after his race was a very sick horse. At the present time Penn is taking his work kindly and his many admirers will watch him with interest during the racing season.

Angus Axworthy, (3) by Hamlin Axworthy is a grand looking individual both in and out of harness and is owned by Secretary Chas. Putnam. Angus was started but twice last season in his two-year-old form; more for education than profit. In his first race at home he made a very creditable showing for his owner finishing third to what was considered colts of high class. In his second start at Belmont he finished first in a field of five others and trotted a quarter in 35 seconds, thus establishing himself as a colt worthy of another year's training.

Conditions are perfect just now for good training and fast time. The fact that Alice McGregor, with a mark of 2:19.4 owned by Assemblyman C. L. Hood of La Crosse, went a mile Friday afternoon in 2:12.2 demonstrates the true value of the local track as a spring training grounds. So early in the season this is exceptional time. Goodluck, 2:13.4—another good one was in the try-out with Alice and it was a neck and neck finish. Mr. Millo also worked out the President Jr. (T) 2:24.3 in a mile get away in 2:17.2 and Rothadu (P) negotiated the mile in 2:18.2. Dr. Wauffe pacer, Miss Logan worked a nice mile in 2:17.2, which stamps her as a safe entry for the slow paces.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

A little more tired at close of day;

A little less anxious to have our way;

A little less ready to scold and blame;

A little more care for a brother's name.

And so we are nearing the journey's end

Where time and eternity meet and blend.

A little less care for bonds and gold;

A little more zeal in the days of old;

A broader view and saner mind;

And a little more love for all mankind;

And so we are faring a-down the way

That leads to the gates of a better day.

A little more love for the friends of youth;

A little less zeal for established truth;

A little more charity in our views;

A little less thirst for the daily news;

And so we are folding our tents away

And passing in silence at close of day.

A little more leisure to sit and dream;

A little more real the things unseen;

A little nearer to those ahead;

With visions of those long-loved and dead;

And so we are going where all must go.

To the place the living may never know.—Rollin J. Wells.

There are many old-time readers of the Gazette who are sojourning on the border line, living over again the busy scenes of active life, who will appreciate the sentiment so happily expressed by Mr. Rollin in the little poem. It tells the story of life in the shadow period, and suggests experiences that will come to all of us who live out allotted time, and the few possible years that may be borrowed beyond. It ought to inspire in the hearts of all of us a more kindly sympathy for the wayfarers who carry with us, waiting patiently to be released.

The viewpoint of life has everything to do with our attitude concerning it. The boy who inherits a fortune, and with it a desire to live a life of ease and luxury, is soon classed with the "idle rich," and he very naturally looks down upon the throng of toilers who crowd the busy highways. He lives in a different world, surrounded by different environments, and breathing a different atmosphere.

The boy who comes from the ranks of toilers, and never rises above the average, is very naturally annoyed with envy for his viewpoint is from another angle, and it is not surprising that classes representing the masses array themselves against the smaller class of incompetent idlers.

But little encouragement is necessary to spread this feeling of discontent until it includes the larger class of well-to-do people, who by thrift and energy have gained a competency, and then the seeds of socialism take root, and a legal division of property is demanded. We are passing through these experiences today, as a people, and all because our viewpoint of life presents a blurred vision due to agitation and exploitation on the part of designing leaders.

The viewpoint of the educator differs from that of the business world, and that is the reason why so much discussion is going on at the present time, about a practical education.

The clergyman looks at life from a spiritual as well as a moral standpoint, and is often discouraged because of lack of interest on the part of average humanity.

The childless home is usually authority on how to bring up children, because the opportunity to study child life is across the fence in the neighbors' yard, and not at close range. This is why the mothers' meetings are often destitute of mothers.

And thus it is, all along down the line. The most of us know better how to run the other fellow's business than he knows himself, and are free to offer advice. If we possessed the happy faculty of putting ourselves in the other fellow's place, and taking a squirt of life from his angle, a broader charity would bless humanity and a common brotherhood would gain in significance.

... The span of human life, which covers existence from the cradle to the final resting place, is divided into five periods, known as childhood, youth, manhood, maturity, and decay. The first represents the dependent age, and the last, in many ways, is very similar. The span between the two seems so long to the child, that the little mind never attempts to grasp it, and so short to the worn-out traveler, that the intervening years seem like a dream.

A little hand caresses the wrinkles on the tired face, and a little voice says, "Grandma, was you ever a little girl like me?" And the voice that used to sing the lullaby at the cradle comes back with the assurance that grandma was once a little girl, just like Dolly.

And then comes the question, "What makes these lines in your face, and what makes your hair so white?" and the child nestles closer while she listens to the story of old father time. There is a bond of sympathy between these children of the extremes, because the heart is the one faculty we possess which never grows old.

The age of youth is the restless age as well as the critical age, where the viewpoint of life is up among the clouds, and the mind which has not yet commenced to do business, aspires to alight, in the midst of the busy throng, and show them how to do things.

Irvin S. Cobb, in one of his late stories, tells about a youth whom he met on a train going out west to fill an important vacancy in a large business house. After hearing him talk for an hour, about what he could do, Cobb said: "If I had a vacancy that I wanted filled in such a way that people would think the vacancy was still there, this youth would have been my candidate."

There is not very much in common between the army which occupies this critical period, and the veterans, at the other end of the line. The one is just ready to enter the arena, while the other has stepped out. The father may be tolerated as the "old man," so long as he pays the bills, but the remnant of the generation ahead of him belongs to the "has beens."

The ranks of active life are constantly recruiting from the restless throng, so eager for admission, and here the viewpoint of life assumes a new aspect. Observation, which next to experience is the best teacher in the world's great university, straightens out the tangles of imagination, and corrects many errors. Yet this is the age which spells disaster and unhappiness to many old people.

The boy not content to work his way to the front, wants his father's capital, to help him to a start, and in return, offers the old folks a home, for the balance of life. The request is so often granted, and the little patrimony which means independence, is sacrificed, not for a home, but for a place, for the ties of blood sometimes become so threadbare that nothing remains but the name.

If this picture seems overwrought, look about you, and you will be convinced that the dependencies of age need protecting from the greed of family ties, more than from anything else. Money commands respect, down to the verge of time, and the man who fails to lay by his competency, during the years of production, faces a dreary ending of the journey, as a rule.

The period of maturity, between the ages of forty and sixty, is the choice period of life. Many of the important lessons have been learned, and scattered through the ranks of successful workers, is the fragment of the generation just ahead, for mature life and old age is rarely out of harmony.

The founder of Selz-Schwab and company, the great shoe manufacturer, died the other day, at the age of eighty-seven. He was active to the end of the journey, and his boys, associated with him, found him a wise and safe counselor.

There is comfort in the little poem which introduces this story, for the worn-out travelers who are nearing the border land, for every line rings true. They have passed the milestone on the dusty highway, where the grim messenger is regarded with terror, for they have come to realize that death is natural as life, and not to be dreaded.

These completed lives, waiting patiently for the call of the Master, should be an inspiration to those of us who are still before the footlights, playing our part in the great drama, for across our pathway lies the goal which they are approaching, and the choice graces, which they possess may be ours, if we cultivate them.

The time is coming in the history of all of us when we will be Yeast cakes that are powerful enough to raise anything from an umbrella to one of wife's first biscuits will be used to accomplish this feat. By digging a hole just outside the cement or brick and having it extend to a point underneath the casket, then dropping in a few of the famous cakes just await results. When the yeast begins to exert its power something has got to give.

While enjoying her usual afternoon stroll one day recently one of our aged grandmas had a thrilling experience with a rattler. As she was passing by the reptile he leaped from his lair and struck his cruel fangs in her skirt. Her first impulse was to strike the reptile and cause him to release his hold on her garments, but being in a corner she was going at such a terrific rate of speed that the head of the reptile was snapped asunder from its body. The snake is dead and grandma is alive and well and daily relates this thrilling story to a happy group of interested grandchildren.

We have received the following letter: "Dear Sir— I am in a quandary. I am obliged to send my regrets to a charming woman who has invited me to a party and I don't know just how to send them. Can you tell me how and help me out of a very embarrassing difficulty?"

Yours sincerely, F. W.

Certainly. You can send your regrets by parcel post, providing of course they are not more than seventy-two inches in length and weigh not more than eleven pounds.

How to Live Cheaply. Dandelion greens are very nutritious and sustaining.

One way to reduce the cost of living is to cut out breakfast, also dinner and supper. Then what you have saved you can pay to the doctor to build you up again.

The codfish is not a high-toned bird, but its meat will prolong life to a considerable extent if you can't get anything else.

As long as your hair and whiskers grow as long as they want to, join the Flying Rollers and beat the barber shop.

A Memory. By gum, I kin recall the time when I was young and in my prime. The wimmin you'd see on the street. Were dressed quite modest and discreet. But that was long ago.

To Patch Wall Paper. Tear a piece slightly larger than the portion to be covered, to match, but torn with rough edges and without any definite shape. Then paste over and the patch will not be noticeable.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, none can get out of ear trouble except by treating the cause, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

STOOD STRAIN WELL

REMARKABLE RECORD RECENTLY MADE AT DETROIT.

Newspaper Man Ran Automobile for 26 Hours Without a Pause or Single Mishap.

It is no secret in the automobile trade that newspaper use is particularly hard on a motor car or delivery wagon. The necessity for constant rush and the habit all newspapers have of getting results, without sparing men or equipment, combine to make a newspaper assignment one that only the sturdiest sort of construction can survive.

An instance characteristic of newspaper cruelty to automobiles comes from the Detroit Free Press.

On the Friday before the annual automobile show number, H. H. Shuart, manager of the paper's automobile department, started on a final round of the factories, salesrooms and branches of Detroit. The time was 9 a. m. and the weather biting cold. Most of the stops were short ones and Shuart was in a hurry, so he didn't take time to shut off and blanket the motor but let it run idle, whenever he left the car's cozy interior.

The trips continued all day and well into the evening, for several advertising men had to be seen at their homes. At 11 p. m. Shuart rolled back to the office. By that time he had forgotten his car had a motor.

At 4 a. m. he emerged from the building and prepared to hail a taxi. He was delighted to note, however, that the garage man had not put his faithful car to bed. The motor was still running. Shuart accordingly jumped in and drove home. He was too tired to care what became of the car, so he left it at the curb and went to bed, leaving a 9 o'clock call.

At 9:30 the faithful roadster welcomed its pilot with lights still burning. Shuart put out the lights. As he did so, he noted that the motor was purring pleasantly. That he had left the car the night before without shutting off the switch dawned on the newspaper man. He grinned and drove away, pausing to do several errands en route to the office.

At 11 a. m. he turned the car in at the garage after a non-stop run of 26 hours. There was still plenty of fuel and oil in the tanks and, despite the large amount of idle running, the radiator was nearly full of water. The car seemed as fresh as at the start.

For Better Routes to Yosemite.

The California motorists are striving for better opportunities in the Yosemite national park and for better roads leading to it. Decided gains have been made during the last year in road improvement, and at a conference held at the park in October the then secretary of the interior expressed his willingness to open that park to automobilists when the needed funds for road improvement within the reserve were at hand.

With the tourist business of the country increasing by leaps and bounds, it is a foregone conclusion that the new administration will early take action which will be in harmony with those interests of the country which seek to make Americans better acquainted with America, with profit to all concerned.

While the scenic road along the rim of the Grand canon, Arizona, and those roads leading on to Hapi, Yavapai, and Grand View points are not yet open to cars, but must be traversed in horse-drawn vehicles provided by a subsidiary of the railroad serving this territory, many commercial bodies are interested in bringing about changed conditions, so that there may be as free use of these scenic routes as is consistent with safety.

Use Turpentine.

There are many uses for turpentine, and the housewife should never be without a liberal supply. If a tablespoonful is placed in the boiler with clothes, it will whiten them beautifully. When washing the utensils used in a sick room add a tablespoonful of turpentine to every pailful of hot water. It will prove an excellent disinfectant, dispels all odors. Turpentine is a preventive of moths. Saturate pieces of brown paper with the liquid and place them in trunks and boxes. If moths are destroying your carpets, iron them on the wrong side with a hot iron and sprinkle the floor generously with turpentine. Turn the carpet back in place and repeat the treatment, if necessary.

American Trait.

"A pronounced American trait is the rush and scramble for wealth. Our national life is weakened by this mad pursuit of money. Money is desired, not only for the luxuries it brings, but above all for the power it confers. All classes and conditions of men bow before the golden deity. There is not much importance attached, in many quarters of our land, to the manner by which wealth is acquired. The advice the shrewd father gave his son is largely followed today: 'Get rich, my son, honestly if you can, but, above all, get rich.'—Suburban Life.

Hesitation.

"Algernon has proposed to me three times," said the charming miss. "And you refused him each time?" "Yes."

"Why don't you want to marry him?" "I do want to marry him. But I hate to give up the pleasure of being proposed to."

It's Worth More than it Costs You

OF COURSE you admit the value of the automobile for any one who has to go from one place to another—and wants to get there and back quickly. We all agree on that point.

The cost of the automobile is what is worrying you, maybe.

You wonder is it worth the money—to you.

Have you ever noticed that when a man buys an automobile, and, after using it, either in his business or for pleasure, or for both, sells it, always buys another one?

Yes? Well, that's the answer.

Buy an automobile, find out that its price is an investment rather than an expense, and you can't do without it. You wouldn't want to.

Because you will have found that the car is worth more to you than it cost you, that it has added to your capacity of doing business, that it made one hour do the work of three, that the store, the theatre, the folks ten miles away, have suddenly become your next-door neighbors, that it has given a store of health to you and your family.

Which automobile?

The Overland—because it is the best value that money can buy.

Whatever your notions are as to what an automobile should be to do justice to your requirements, whether you value power, comfort, impressive appearance, low cost of upkeep, or the kind of durability—Overland durability—that makes the possession of a car a source of downright satisfaction, you can't afford to consider any automobile without first investigating the new Overland.

At last come and take a look at it. Compare it with others. Let us give you a ride in the big, fully equipped Overland; it involves no obligation on your part. Then draw your own conclusions.—That's all.

STREET CLEANERS' SCHOOL IS CHICAGO INNOVATION

(Inter-Ocean.) There are twenty-nine ways of handling a broom, one correct way and twenty-eight wrong ways, according to the newly created technical board of the bureau of streets. All twenty-nine are to be included in the curriculum of the new school for Chicago street cleaners to be opened in the near future if recommendations made by the board are put into effect. The board plans to make Chicago a real spotless town and to educate its street sweepers to such a high state of efficiency that they will be models for the rest of the country. One of the first changes will be the attire of all sweepers in white duck uniforms which will be kept scrupulously clean by daily laundering. White helmets and brown leggings will complete the cleaners' dress. Drivers and collectors will wear brown uniforms and inspectors, dark blue. The proposed innovation is the introduction of the squeegee system of street cleaning. Members of the board will visit Milwaukee, where this method now is employed. The squeegee method is applied with a machine which scrapes the street and then scrapes the dirt to one side with a large flat scraper. Definite schedules, standards and routes used in the removal of waste also have been studied by the board with a view to standardizing them and eliminating waste time. These schedules have been put into operation in the Thirteenth ward and will be applied to others soon. It is in the school, however, that the board expects to produce the greatest efficiency. Not only will the most practical ways of utilizing tools and machines be demonstrated, but the theory of street cleaning will be taught fully.

FOND DU LAC WATER SERIOUSLY CONTAMINATED

That the city water supply is in a bad state of contamination is indicated by a report received by City Physician F. M. McGauley from Madison today upon the bacteriological examination of a sample of water sent down on June 2. The report contains the statement: "Water polluted," while the chemical analysis report states that the quality is unsatisfactory. The report also states a trace of organic matter in evidence. The water was taken from the tap at the plumbing plant. The bacteriological report shows that bacteria per cubic centimeter numbered 1,996. The greatest previous registration in any report was 2,700. The report further shows that there is evidence of colon bacteria in the water. This is the bacteria known as the cause of typhoid fever, conditions. The report further shows an utter absence of acid producing bacteria. No reply has been received from the state health department in relation to the letter sent by the water commission to have a sanitary expert investigate local water conditions. In view of the report on the water received today, the health department issued last week to boil the water before drinking it, should be borne in mind—Commonwealth.

MITCHELL MAY OBTAIN MUNICIPAL TELEPHONE

Mitchell, The question of whether or not the people of Mitchell wish to have a municipal telephone is the subject of a referendum to be held in order to build a municipal telephone exchange here or not will come up to a vote Tuesday, June 16. There is considerable opposition to Mayor Hitchcock's proposition and there is some doubt if the matter will carry. Those who have investigated the question claim that there is not a municipal telephone in operation which has made good, either from lack of proper maintenance or from inefficiency in the superintending of the installation of the system, and from inadequate rates for maintenance. Seattle has but recently turned down a similar proposition and the people of Mitchell who have not been influenced by Mayor Hitchcock in his scrap with the Dakota Central Telephone company, are inclined to prefer the new municipal service. The company has installed here, which it is known will give good service rather than run themselves in debt to secure a system which will be greatly inferior to the present system at the best.

WHITE WAY TYPE LIGHTS INSTALLED AT GREEN BAY

Lights of the White Way type, type erected by the White Way Lighting club, composed of business men with establishments on West Walnut street between Broadway and Fox river, have been operating successfully since Tuesday evening. The lights give between six and four times as much illumination as the ordinary lights on the street corners of the city. There are 24 of the posts in the two blocks. Since the lamps have proved so successful, here, a delegation of merchants is to come here next week from Waupun, and business men of Ashkosh and Sheboygan are expected to come to the merchants in those cities are considering installing street lamps. This city is the first in Wisconsin to install lamps of this type which are at this time the brightest in use. Gazette.

PLAN GREAT IMPROVEMENT FOR CAPITOL GROUNDS

Pierre—State Engineer Dorr has completed plans for the bridge and dam to be constructed jointly by the city and state, on Capitol avenue, for the holding of water in the proposed lake on the capitol grounds and to improve the avenue on the east side of the grounds. The work is to be of concrete and the bridge to be forty-eight feet in width, with a road of thirty-two feet and two eight foot sidewalks. The appropriation of the last legislative session for the capitol grounds was for this purpose, and it is expected that the construction work will begin soon after the first of July.

FOND DU LAC MOTORCYCLE POLICEMAN KEPT BUSY

Al (Khaki) Zoelner, Fond du Lac's motorcycle policeman, has covered close to three hundred miles in the few days that he has been astride the new motor cycle recently purchased for the use of the department of police. The motor cycle is completely equipped for police service. It has a speedometer in a convenient place, while for night riding it is equipped with a powerful searchlight. The motor cycle's "copper" when on duty is attired in a khaki suit and presents a nifty appearance. Commonwealth.

MORE SALOON LICENSES FOR MADISON PROBABLE

The annexation of Fair Oaks, Hudson Park, Elmside and Park View requires a new ordinance which limits the number of saloons to 88. City Clerk Norsman already has received about 90 applications for liquor licenses and the indications are the total number will be 94. At the council meeting Friday night an amendment extending the number from 88 to 94 will be introduced and final action is to be taken on it at the adjournment meeting June 27 at which the licenses also will be issued. PREPARING TO PURCHASE STREET CAR SYSTEM

(Superior Telegram) The city legal department will within the next few days commence work on a brief, outlining the plan of action which the city will have to follow in taking over the Superior holdings of the street railway company. The brief will cover all points of law involved in the purchase of the traction system and will probably take some time to prepare. As soon as it has been completed the city commission will have action to take on the desires of the people of the city as expressed at the spring election, and at the meeting of labor and business representatives on Monday night.

NEW GARBAGE INCINERATOR WILL BE GIVEN TEST

(Racine Journal-News.) When the garbage plant is completed and ready to be turned over to the city of Racine, there will be a public test of the new incinerator. Tons of garbage will be disposed of in the presence of the architects, contractors and city officials. Then from forty to fifty tons will be collected and burned, the public at large being invited to call at the plant and witness the process of disposal. At the present time it is expected that the incinerator will be completed and ready to turn over to the municipality not later than July.

SEVERAL FROM HERE EXPECT TO ATTEND GETTYSBURG EVENT

Extensive Preparation as Being Made

Extensive Preparations are Being Made by Commission to Provide For 45,000 Veterans. F. S. Winslow, A. F. Hall, Ferdinand Lee, Lucius Lee and Capt. B. F. Moore are among the Janesville veterans of the battle of Gettysburg, who are planning to attend the peace jubilee July 1, 2, 3, and 4 at which there will be 45,000 or more veterans of the important battle which was fought July 1, 1863. The state legislature has already appropriated money to provide for the transportation of the Wisconsin veterans and are at present considering an additional appropriation of $5,000 to provide for the increasing number who have signified their intentions to take advantage of the state's offer.

Extensive preparations have been made by the commission for the entertainment of the old soldiers. A menu for the entire week has been arranged and was published in a recent issue of the National Tribune. The menu for July 1 is reprinted:

Breakfast: Stewed prunes, boiled rice and milk, fried liver and bacon, hard bread, butter, coffee, sugar, salt, pepper and vinegar.

Dinner: Roast beef, roast potatoes, mashed turnips, rice pudding, bread, butter, coffee, sugar, salt and pepper.

Supper: Boiled corn, beef, baked sweet potatoes, sliced tomatoes, fresh bread, hard bread, coffee, sugar, salt and pepper.

The same article says: "A brigade of 1,500 cooks will be required to prepare the rations. At the head of these will be cooks from the regular army trained in preparing great quantities of food and in handling the culinary force. Not enough cooks could be spared for the camp and it is expected to bring in cooks who have had experience in the National Guard Encampments and others of similar experience. The head cooks will arrive July 27 and begin their preparations, and other cooks June 28, and the work of issuing rations will begin with supper, June 29. The washing of the dishes will be an immense job and will be provided for by a crew especially selected and assigned for the work."

All anxiety as to the water may be dismissed, since provision has been made for any possible exigency. Already three wells have been put down, ranging in depth from 342 to 550 feet. These strike a lower strata of abundant water which has been found by perfect examination to be absolutely pure. The fourth well is now down 335 feet. Mats are now being laid to convey the water to every part of the camp for all purposes.

There is no word on the ground, a battalion of the 5th U. S. Cavalry, numbering 250 men under the command of Major Armand L. Lasseigne, a native of Louisiana, and a graduate of West Point. The battalion is at present engaged in guarding government property. It will have charge of the camp, establish a guard line around it, maintain order and admit none to the quarters and rations except those who have proper credentials.

The hospital arrangements are unusually excellent, and the veterans have been provided for with special reference to their liability to sudden prostrations. There will be three main infirmaries, the principal one being between the camp and the station. There will be two other infirmaries, one for the Confederate and one for the Union camp. Each of these will be supplied with medical officers, a sergeant and eight privates.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher

Of all the bodes above the ground, who should be sent to glory, the greatest is the one who's bound to tell a funny story. I always shudder when I come to this anecdotal honker, displaying all his teeth and gums in mirth. He cannot conquer. I always know just what he'll say. BORES when he is thus enthusiastic. One day that seemed to me amazing. And then he starts a hoary tale that is too fierce to dwell on, a yarn that Adam counted stale, and Noah rung the bell on. I yawn, I shiver, I scowl, I glow, and say to him after he has told his bearded story, The bright and sunny morning goes, and still the faster laborers I hear him saying, as I stand in the golden afternoon is pushing, sadly, slowly, I hope that he is finished soon with that romance untold. In vain! Night comes, the stars appear on high in twinkling glory; the

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

LEIF ERICSON.

By Howard L. Rann.

Leif Ericson was one of a large number of men who discovered America and never got any credit for it in the newspapers. Ericson discovered the state of Massachusetts. Columbus played the egg-trick on Ferdinand and Isabella and all he got out of it was a pension of duty, well done and a chronic case of sciatic rheumatism. Columbus returned home and stayed on the front page for weeks, while Ericson was good for a two-line personal until he had been dead several years.

At the time Ericson discovered the country nobody knew that it was here and there was very little curiosity as to what it looked like. This was in 1,000 A. D., and there was no way to get to Massachusetts from Norway except by water, none of which was fit to drink. When Ericson came back and told about Martha's Vineyard and the money that was being made in grape juice, nobody believed him and his home people intimated that his head ought to be repaired. A crew of different men was from the way Isabella, told Columbus around in her limousine and hung large coils of rented jewelry about his neck.

People who were present at the time say that it was not Ericson's intention to discover anything, but some drinking water when he encountered Massachusetts. This story is not true. Ericson was a very spirited relative of Columbus and a malicious fabrication. If Ericson had his dues, he would now be standing up on some expensive monument, with an eagle look and legs slightly bowed, instead of C. Columbus.

Ericson apparently did not think much of America after he had discovered it. For after conquering the Buzzard's Bay brand of drop-fronted rheumatism he sailed away and allowed Columbus to come along in 1492 and seize the coast line in the name of Spain. However, as this is the only thing Spanish in the history of our without, however, repairs immediately afterward. We should not feel.

MILTON

On June 14, 1913, Milton, and Milton Junior automobile fourth of July Boosters left on a tour of the following towns: Yesterday forenoon to advertise the celebration here, and were accompanied by the Firemen's head. They stopped at Fort Atkinson, Whitewater, Johnsonville, Janesville,

I, "The Chiropractor," Say That Nature Will Make You Well

Chiropractic Adjustments Rightly Applied Will Remove the Cause of Your Trouble. No matter What It May Be, Nature Will Step in and Make You Well, With the Spine in Perfect Shape You Can Throw Off All Disease.

With the cause of your disease removed by my Chiropractic adjustments you will get well in just the same way you are now. My adjustments correct subluxations of the spine. Subluxations of the spine cause a pressure on the nerves leading from the brain to all parts of the body. As long as the pressure remains, the life impulses which flow through the nerves are stopped, and the parts of the body which they supply cannot perform their functions. If my Chiropractic Adjustments are given, the pressure removed, the life impulses flow readily, then, and not until then will you get well. Not one man in a thousand has a perfect spine, and not one man or woman in a thousand is enjoying perfect health. To little minor aches and pains do not bother you, but they are nature's signs of something wrong and unless that something is given attention it may lead to a serious ailment. Come to me and talk it over.

SPINAL CURVATURE

My new method for reducing Spinal Curvature is proving successful. Cases get well quickly and with few adjustments.

Here are some records you'll be interested in:

Stomach and Spleen. Heart and Liver.

Illustration No. 13, showing the cause of Stomach and Spleen trouble, through vertebral subluxation. When this case was examined by me this morning, the cause of the trouble was immediately located. The trouble was entirely overcome by adjusting the spine at the 7th, 8th and 9th dorsal vertebrae.

thus freeing the nerves to the stomach and restoring the mental impulses which are life. I have a great number of these cases and am very successful with them.

Female Weakness. Illustration No. 14 shows the cause of Female Weakness. Chiropractic is the first and best remedy, by removing the nerve pressure at the spine relieves the intense suffering many of our patients are afflicted with. It is when they first come to my office for adjustment. A very few adjustments are sufficient to relieve these cases.

Illustration No. 4 shows a young man suffering from catarrh and deafness for many years. I adjusted the 3rd vertebra of his neck, freed the nerves to the ears, nose and head and he is now well. The same man works out in liver trouble, biliousness, etc. Come and talk it over if you are bothered with liver trouble.

Deafness. Illustration No. 4 shows a young man suffering from catarrh and deafness for many years. I adjusted the 3rd vertebra of his neck, freed the nerves to the ears, nose and head and he is now well. The same man works out in liver trouble, biliousness, etc. Come and talk it over if you are bothered with liver trouble.

Cramps in the Arms. Illustration No. 9, showing the cause of cramps in the arms, or having the arms go to sleep. Many people are troubled with this sort of thing and want them to know that they can get quick relief here from me. A few adjustments, removing the pressure on the spinal nerves, will completely remove the cause of this trouble and you will never be bothered again.

A few of the many diseases I adjust for daily: Lamé Back, Rheumatism, Bladder Trouble, Nervousness, Kidney Trouble, Headaches, Stomach troubles, Fever, Liver Trouble, Neuritis, Ovarian Trouble, Asthma, Constipation, and others.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

FORGETTING TO BE HAPPY

"I have faltered more or less. In my great life of happiness. If I have moved among my race. And shown no glorious morning face. If beams from happy human eyes. Have moved me not. If more skies. Books, and my food, and summer rain. Knocked on my sullen heart in vain. Lord, Thy most pointed pleasure take. And stab my spirit broad awake."

A thoroughly good memory for things in general is a rarity. But infinitely rarer is a memory for certain things in particular, people's names, for example, benefits conferred for another, and happiness for another.

Especially the latter. How very easily and quickly most of us forget to be happy. Suppose you should have an automobile given you tomorrow (and perhaps we'd better say, the where-withal to run it); suppose your husband should get a big raise in salary; suppose the very biggest annoyance of your life were to be forever removed; suppose some rich relative whom you do not even know, and hence could not grieve for, should leave you a hundred thousand dollars tomorrow. Don't you think you would be happy for a very long time?

You wouldn't. Of course you would be very happy for a while, but it's astonishing how short that while would be. Somehow it doesn't take any particular effort to remember to be unhappy over the tangles that won't come straight, and the conditions in our lives that aren't pleasing, and the luxuries we cannot have. But when the tangible, the disengaged, the disengaged condition disappears, or we gain the coveted possession, how hard it is to remember to be happy over our blessing more than a day or two.

The duty of happiness is one of the most sadly neglected duties in the world. Indeed there are still many people who do not, even recognize the great task of happiness.

The old idea that one must necessarily be sour and miserable in order to be good is slowly disappearing, but its positive, the idea that goodness and happiness are more or less synonymous, still smelt of brimstone to many folks.

I know a woman whose morning prayer is "May I be happy today and make others say 'Do you think she can wander very far from the right path if that prayer is granted?'" two cupsful of flour, two cupsful of sour milk, one cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of chopped raisins, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of salt. After stirring the flour into a basin add the brown sugar, raisins and salt. Mix the soda and sour milk together, then pour them among the dry ingredients, turn into a buttered pan and bake in a moderately hot oven for one hour.

Is there not some blessing in your life today that you were once sure would make you very happy? And have you forgotten to be so? Then begin again today. It's never too late to remember to be happy.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

MY I reach that point, heaven be the cup of strength and great agony. Enkindle generous ardor, feed pure love. Beget the smiles that have no cruelty. Be the sweet presence of a good, diffused. And in diffusion even more intense. Be still, for the choir invisible. Whose music is the gladness of the world. —George Eliot.

PRACTICAL HINTS.

After making sandwiches place them in an earthen crock and cover tightly. Set the crock in a pan of cold water, and the sandwiches will keep moist for hours.

To render boots and shoes water-proof, rub a little mutton fat around the edges of the soles. Beeswax is just as good.

Save all the tissue paper to put into sleeves and under folds to keep dresses from becoming creased.

Rhubarb is rich in oxalic acid, which is a good tonic. Spinach is a good blood purifier. Celery and lettuce is good for the nerves.

A piece of garden hose makes a fine rug beater. It may be split at the end to make the beating more effective.

When cooking fowl of any kind, turn the breast down as the white meat needs the flavor of the juice which will then pass into it.

Raisins are easily stoned if boiling water is poured on them and they are left in it for a short time.

Waxed paper should be saved to wrap about bread or any food that one wishes to keep from drying.

Bits of moistened newspaper thrown over a rug or carpet before sweeping saves much dust. Tea leaves well moistened are also good.

Asparagus, cabbage and cauliflower are chiefly valued because of the bulk and variety they give to the diet.

Rhubarb cut in very thin slices and combined with desiccated coconut, served on lettuce leaves with French dressing is not a well known salad.

Use the radiator for the fireless cooker for the iron stand on ironing day, the irons will keep hot much longer.

When buying napkins on the bargain counter, see that they are square or you will regret your bargain when they come to be laundered.

Cheese balls made of either cream or cottage cheese make effective garnishes for salads. They may be rolled in chopped chives, parsley or decorated with half nut meats.

Remove pulp from grape fruit and mix with shredded pineapple, bananas cut in slices and slices cut in halves, adding half as much pineapple and bananas as grape fruit, and allowing four strawberries to each service. There should be two cups fruit. Pour over a dressing made of one-third cup sherry wine, three tablespoons apricot brandy, one-third cup sugar and a few grains salt. Chill thoroughly, serve in cocktail glasses.

Snow Fruit. Cut in bits, apples, oranges, raisins, and bananas. Scatter between each layer fresh grated coconut or proteid nuts and sugar. Serve with whipped cream or fruit juice. This recipe can be varied or changed according to fruit or berries in season, exercising care, however, to use only one kind of highly acidulous fruit.

Fruit and Nut Medley. Slice very ripe bananas, cut, pineapple and orange in small pieces. Put a layer of each in dish, until filled. Sprinkle between each layer chopped nuts and sugar. This can be served with cream or fruit juices.

basin and add a quarter of a pound of chopped salt pork, then add well beaten eggs, two teaspoonsful of lemon juice, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of salt, and a few grains of red pepper. Moisten with veal stock and press into a buttered pan. Cover and bake for one hour. Baste frequently during the baking. Turn out and serve with tomato sauce.

Iced Tea—Put a large piece of ice into punch bowl, make a quart of the tea you prefer, but make it much stronger than when it is to be drunk hot. Then wash two lemons and slice them into the bowl. Add enough sugar to make the tea medium sweet and chill.

Fruit Punch—One pound of granulated sugar, the juice of a dozen lemons, the juice of a dozen small oranges, two quarts of water. Put all three ingredients into a bowl and stir until the sugar dissolves. Then strain into a punch bowl and add a pint of raspberry shrub. Chill and serve with powdered sugar. This will make 25 cups.

Strawberry Canneloni—Make a syrup of two cupsful of sugar and one quart of water, add a tablespoonful of yellow and set aside to cool. When cold add a pint of fresh strawberry pulp and the juice of two lemons. Line a cylindrical mold with the mixture, fill the center with cold whipped cream, sweetened to which a little dissolved gelatin has been added, and pack in salt and ice for at least an hour. When serving garnish with sliced berries.

Eran Bread—Two cupsful of bran,

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By Mrs. Thompson

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am thirty seven years old, have traveled all over the United States and have had a roaming disposition. A few years ago I came home to take care of my mother and father, who are getting old and need me. I have a very good disposition and am having a home.

I have been visiting and writing to a lady friend two years, whom I have known since childhood. I believe she loves me. She, too, has an aged mother and father, who are well and contented and is also very domestic, but not very strong physically.

I have only a fair education and have dissipated a good deal of my income, with the kind you can respect, they have been used to living. I haven't asked the girl to marry me, but have stated plain facts to her as to why I don't think I should engage myself to any woman at present. She seems willing to wait. She is nine years my junior.

(1) Should I keep her waiting indefinitely or cease my attentions toward her and give her a chance to find somebody else?

(2) Do you believe two mother-in-laws can get along under the same roof?

(3) Is there too much difference in our ages at our stage of life?

(4) Please give me your best opinion as to what I should do. Should I marry the girl?

MISSISSIPPI.

(1) If you really want to do what is best for the girl, set her free at once and give her a chance to marry a man who can properly care for her.

(2) I do not think two mothers-in-law can live in one house in peace.

(3) No. (4) Answered in No. 1.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a boy seventeen years old. I am about five feet six inches tall. I am not deformed in any way. I have dark brown hair and gray eyes. I neither drink, chew nor smoke. I always try to treat the girls I meet as a gentleman should. It seems I cannot have any girl-friends, no matter how hard I try. Other boys know who would not treat any girl with any respect have lots of girl friends, while I have not even one. Can you tell me the reason? I am not so bad looking, and I have a fairly good education.

LONDSOME JOE.

The right kind of girl will like you, Joe, so be patient till you meet the right sort. You don't want anything to do with the kind you can respect, do you?—and if they let other boys take liberties with them, you know you can't respect those girls. Keep right on being a gentleman. You'll win out, and you won't be lonesome either—though I'd rather be lonesome and know I'm right than hunt my conscience by trying to do what I know isn't just right, even though it brings me lots of company.

Try and find out what girls like to talk about. Compliment a girl honestly. Let her see that you think she's just about right. First thing you know you'll be discovering that some of the nice girls will think you are just about right.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Christmas I sent a young man friend a very pretty present and since then I have broken off with him and we have returned each other's letters, but he did not return this present and I would like to have it back.

The present he sent me was something to be used and I have used it, and of course cannot return it. He did give me a subscription to a magazine, one that I do not enjoy reading, and do you think I could ask him to send me the present and at the same time ask him if he has not some friend that he would like to transfer the magazine to?

H. L.

Unless it is something of an intimate nature, let him keep it, otherwise ask him to return it, and refer to the magazine subscription as you suggest.

Pineapple Lemonade—Make a plain lemonade with one pound of sugar boiled for three minutes with one pint of water, the strained juice, four lemons and two quarts of cold water. To this add a ripe pineapple, which has been pared, cored and grated. Other fruits may be used with lemonade in the same way.

Popovers—Beat three eggs until they are very light and add two cups of milk and a teaspoonful of salt. Pour this into two cups of flour, beating all the time. Continue to beat till the batter is very smooth and uniform. Strain through a sieve before filling gem pans that have been buttered and made very hot. Bake in a hot oven for twenty to twenty-five minutes, but do not open the oven door to look at the popovers until they have been in the oven at least fifteen minutes or they will fall.

When Her Back Aches

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.
Janesville women know how the aches and pains that often come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, are frequent indications of weak kidneys and should be checked in time. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. They attack kidney diseases by striking at the cause. Can Janesville sufferers desire stronger proof than this woman's words?
Mrs. J. Miller, East St., Clinton, Wis., says: "I have no hesitation whatever in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills for I received great benefit from them. I was subject to acute attacks of backache and I had headaches and dizzy spells. Last winter I was suffering intensely from these troubles and at that time Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention. This remedy helped me in every way and relieved all the symptoms of my complaint. Others of my family have profited by taking Doan's Kidney Pills."

Bruce gazed directly at him for a moment and then said slowly, "In asking you to take this case, Mr. Kayton, I was fully prepared to pay all of the expenses of the investigation and pay you whatever fee you consider reasonable."

"We'll talk about the fee when I deliver the goods," replied the detective quietly. "I am sorry to dismiss you, but I have to catch a train."

"But I wanted you to begin at once," he protested.

"Impossible," said Mr. Kayton shortly, buttoning his gloves.

"But—but—when?"

"I will be at your house at 9 o'clock in the morning," returned Mr. Kayton. Bruce drew a long breath of relief.

"You're not going far, then?"

"Only to Albany," replied Mr. Kayton. "I will return on the last train tonight."

Bruce sighed. "Well, I suppose it's the best we can do," he said, as they shook hands at the foot of the elevator. "But I did want to choke those morning papers off some way."

Again that faint smile flickered across Mr. Kayton's face.

"Don't worry about the morning papers, Mr. Argyle," he said. "There will be news from Albany tonight that will make them forget about you."

"Well, you're to draw the curtains and air the room, are you not?"

It was the morning after the interview just narrated, and Finley, the old butler of the Argyle household, glowered upon young Topp, the cockney footman. Bruce Argyle had given orders that the library should be opened and made ready for the reception of Mr. Kayton, and Topp was objecting.

"Appen I am," he retorted sullenly. "But do I have to do it alone, Mr. Finley, or do I have help?"

"What his ye, Topp?" demanded the butler, though he knew well enough. They stood at the open door of the library.

"The same thing that's ailing you, likely," growled the footman. "I hain't goin' alone into the 'bloomin' tomb'."

"Finley eyed him in scorn. 'Aw, ye're worse than the wimmin. What's to hurt ye? Come on in wit' ye!'"

He strode bravely into the gloomy apartment and in the dim light stumbled over a chair. Topp suppressed a yell, and both stood shivering.

"What's that?" demanded the footman in a quavering voice.

"It's a chair," responded the butler, striving in vain to speak unconcernedly. "Sit down on it."

Topp shook his head and shivered again as he gazed about the darkened, massive room. "I hain't the sort o' bloke who sticks at a thing," he declared, "but I don't fancy a room where 'errors' are 'appened'."

The older man had recovered his poise, and he boldly drew back the curtain and opened a window.

"Mister Argyle was as good a master as ever lived," he said cheerily. "Why shud ye be feared o' the place where he died?"

"E may have been a good man, Mister Finley—but e died a hunnat-natural death."

Finley snorted. "I'm thinkin' yer snobilities are too refined for yer walk in life. Ye may be called upon to do worse things than to open the windles on th' scenes of murder—God willin'!"

Topp, in the meantime, had opened another window, and the draft from the two caused the door into the hall to swing softly to and shut with a click. Both men wheeled as if a pistol had gone off behind them.

"That's, innit," yelled Topp. And the next instant he was down the hall, almost upsetting Bruce Argyle, who was coming to inspect the library.

"What's the matter with Topp," he demanded. Old man Finley gulped hard. "It's his nerves, sir," he said unsteadily. "He's got the fear o' the room."

Young Argyle glanced about uncomfortably. "Oh," he said slowly. "Let in all the sunlight you can, Finley. There never were windows enough here." He turned to another door that opened into the farther part of the house. "Is this door unlocked?"

"Not yet, sir."

Bruce unlocked it. The door opened immediately into a pretty sunlit morning room, and a soft voice hailed him from the window seat.

"Are you there, Bruce?"

"Yes. Come in, Nan."

In obedience to his summons there entered a dainty, blue-eyed damsel of about twenty-two, so finely and exquisitely molded that she looked like porcelain. She gave a timid glance about the interior of the room.

"Having this room opened?"

Finley approached. "What time am I to expect the detective, sir?" he inquired.

"Any time, now," Bruce replied, and Finley withdrew with a bow.

"More detectives coming, Bruce?" asked the girl with a little frown.

"Yes," he replied, with a nod, and added: "Asche-Kayton."

"Oh," said the girl doubtfully. "Do you think he can do anything?"

"He's the greatest detective in the country," returned Argyle. "If he can't, nobody can. If we'd got him at that we wouldn't have had the thing all muddled up the way it is now, with suspicion on me and Mary and—everybody."

Miss Thompson shook her head, apparently lost between hopelessness and obstinacy.

"I don't believe it'll ever be found out who killed him," she declared.

Argyle shrugged his shoulders impatiently. "If Kayton finds out enough to clear Mary that's all I ask," he said shortly. Instantly the girl's hand was on his arm and her eyes looked up into his troubled face in love and sympathy.

"Oh, Bruce, dear," she exclaimed softly, "nobody believes you or Mary had anything to do with it."

"Nobody that knows us, of course!" said Argyle gravely. "But what about the people that read the newspapers and don't know us? How is Mary?"

"She's wonderful!" breathed the girl. "The way she keeps up! I'd go out of my mind! But she's so strange, Bruce. She hasn't said a word about your father since I came. She simply won't speak of it."

Bruce nodded, staring thoughtfully straight out before him.

"Mary's always like that," he said. "She never talks about the things that are 'way deep down in her. The old man knew it. And he liked her for it. I guess. He could quarrel with me, but he could never get a rise out of Mary. She just simply kept quiet and—got her own way with him. He never forgave me for refusing to marry her, but he never quarreled with her for refusing to marry me."

The girl vehemently possessed herself of his hand. "I'm glad she refused," she whispered. Bruce slipped his arm about his sweetheart's waist and kissed the top of her head.

"She understood about you, Nan," he said gently, "from the first. And she was doing everything she could to help us with him. If he'd lived she'd have brought him around. He probably cared more for her than for anything else in the world. It's been that way ever since she was a little girl—ever since she came here to live."

He broke off and drew away from the girl as a woman of about forty-five, breathing audibly and plainly very nervous and excited, sort of swarmed into the library. She was a highly respectable, if not highly intellectual, woman whom the elder Argyle had retained as a companion to his adopted daughter.

"Good morning, Bruce," she panted, bustling over to a window and closing it violently. "I didn't know you were here. Finley tells me that man—that detective—Kayton is coming."

"Yes," nodded Bruce. Mrs. Wyatt rolled her eyes. She was evidently in a chronic condition of excitement over something that had happened or in agitation over something that was likely to happen.

"I think you're perfectly right," she declared, fanning herself with a magazine. "I mean to say those police detectives aren't getting anywhere. Here it's a whole week and we don't know any more than we did at first."

"Well, this Kayton is a wonder," said Bruce, preparing to leave. "He'll find some clue that all the other detectives have missed. I've got to go now, Nan. The lawyers have sent for me. I'll be right back."

Mrs. Wyatt sighed gustily and gazed about her as Bruce disappeared.

"You know, Miss Thompson," she said, "this has been my home for twenty years, ever since Mary was taken into the family, but it never will be again. I mean to say I never could feel at home in a house where there'd been a murder. I suppose I'm peculiar, but I never—but it doesn't make any difference whether the room is opened or locked up. I can't go by without feeling it. Do you understand what I mean? I suppose," another sigh—"I suppose Mary'll sell the place. Have you heard anything about it?"

"Oh, no!" exclaimed the girl hastily.

"Well," Mrs. Wyatt pursed her lips and breathed even more rapidly. "What do you think of the will?"

Miss Thompson looked uncomfortable. "I think it's very unjust, of course," she replied reluctantly. Mrs. Wyatt shook her head darkly.

"Mr. Argyle was a very strange man. I don't want to say anything disagreeable about the deed, but it's certainly hard to understand how a man could cut his own son off without a cent and leave a fortune to a girl who is in no way related to him."

"I don't believe Mary will let the will stand," interposed Miss Thompson, with the manner of one anxious to turn a disagreeable conversation.

"Miss Thompson, I'd say that, too, but money changes people, so. I mean to say—take a perfectly fair-minded person like Mary, generous to a fault, and you never can tell what money will bring out in them—do you know what I mean?"

Miss Thompson was spared the pain of a further discussion of the subject by the reappearance of Finley with the announcement that the detectives had come. Miss Wyatt said she supposed they might as well come right in.

"Hnd't we better go?" suggested Miss Thompson after Finley had departed with the instructions.

"Yes—yes," agreed Mrs. Wyatt, hastening toward the door. "I don't want to see him. I mean to say—I've seen enough detectives during the past week to last me the rest of my life!"

They hurried into the morning room and closed the door behind them just as Kayton and one of his men entered from the hall.

CHAPTER III.
Finger Prints.

FINLEY followed the two detectives into the somber room and eyed them suspiciously as their glances traveled slowly about, taking in every detail of arrangement and furnishings. The general scheme of the room was dark and polished oak, and since it was lighted from only one of the four sides, as is common in the homes of even the wealthiest in New York, there was always a half gloom that would be restful under ordinary circumstances, but now uncanny. In the decorations and other fittings the plan seemed to have been rather to deepen than lighten this effect. Tables, chairs, desks—all were dark and massive. The upholstery was a tawny yellow that added the appearance of great age. Andirons and other bronzes were dulled and heavy, and the pictures—two or three Barbizon landscapes—rang true to the tenor of the great room in their dull gold frames. There was one note of rich color where the reflected light of the day outside shone through the stained glass armorial bearings in the windows, and this only accentuated the depressing effect.

Kayton and his assistant, a boyish young fellow of about twenty-five, took in all of this in a brief but trained scrutiny. Kayton walked to one of the windows, opened it and leaned out far enough to see that the other commanded only the same view. Young Manning continued to gaze about. Finley remained aloof and suspicious in the background. He was waiting for the detectives to get to work. He did not understand that they were already hard at it. He grew more and more suspicious and contemptuous as the morning went on, for he could not see that the so-called great detective did anything more, or even as much, as the regular force that had already been over the ground.

And in a way he was correct. It is not what he learns, but the use he makes of what he learns that distinguishes the great artist in detection from the common bungler. By reasoning clearly and unwaveringly from the same premises he reaches conclusions that shock the public and the jury that has preceded him on the work, simply because the latter has not had the common sense to drift with the never misleading current of logic. By this unpretentious application of common sense, this faith in the correctness of simple reasoning, successful defenders of society have been given credit for much spurious profundity, which they are the first to disclaim. When they deny that there is anything wonderful about it we murmur that modesty and greatness ever walk hand in hand. It is not modesty. It is the truth.

THE STRANGER.

Edgar Fearnought turned a bit paler, if anything, and wiped his forehead with the back of an envelope.

"Strange!" he muttered, "that I should meet you today, the anniversary of the passing of the city ordinance forbidding the casting of slippery substances on the city pavements. Just one year ago today it was, and it is estimated that almost thousands of lives have been saved. But you? Who are you?"

And Edgar Fearnought turned the envelope around and wiped his forehead with the address.

"I," said the stranger, with a low laugh, "am the guy that put the ban on banana skins!"

There was no reply, for Edgar Fearnought had swooned.

How To Get Strong

Doctors agree that the only way to gain strength is through food that is taken into the system. That is why a pure food medicine, such as Father John's Medicine, makes strength by means of its nourishing body-building elements which are easily taken into the system.

Those who are weak and run down have the best chance to regain flesh and strength during the summer months. How best to gain weight is told in the following interviews:

Capt. H. F. Rehberg, 69 Carnation St., Pawtucket, R. I., says: "I gained 18 pounds while I was taking Father John's Medicine."

Mrs. G. A. Goodwin, of Blossburg, Pa., says: "My boy gained 30 pounds while he was taking Father John's Medicine. It is a grand body builder."

"I gained 20 pounds taking Father John's Medicine," says M. Crosby, 2151 8th Ave., New York City.

If you have any difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.
